Senators Reconciling their Differences on the Cattle Bill.

Objections to Changes in the Foreign State Service.

Hewitt Reiterates His Charge Against Secretary Chandler.

An Appeal for Liberality

WASHINGTON, April 28.—The president sent to the house of representatives to-day a long communication from the secretary of state with regard to the proposed reduction in the amount appropriated by the consular and diplomatic bill and changes proposed in the consular and diplomatic service of the United States. It consists mainly of suggestions as to the duties and needs of officers of the United States abroad and the necessity of maintaining the two services, consular and diplomatic, distinct and upon an effective basis.

Frelinghuysen considers it inexpedient to require representatives of the United States abroad to exercise at the same time both consular and diplomatic functions, partly because it is looked upon by many foreign governments with disfavor as manifesting want of proper respect for them by the government of the United States and partly because the duties of consuls differ widely from those of diplomatic officers, and each class of duties requires the undivided time and attention of a single person.

Postal Telegraphy.

WASHINGTON, April 28.—The sub-committee of the house committee on post offices and post roads having under consideration postal telegraphy met to day to consider a bill providing for the contract system. The senate bill on that subject was taken as a basis. A lengthy discussion took place respecting the maximum uniform limit at which rate a contract should be made, some members of the committee contended that a uniform rate should be fixed at twenty cents for twenty words, while others held that twenty cents was too low to induce competent corporations to compete for the contract, and maintained that the minimum rate should be at least 25 cents. The opinion is expressed that the full committee will adopt the latter figure. The bill was not perfected when the sub committee adjourned and definite action was postponed until to-morrow.

Soldiers' Lands

WASHINGTON, April 28.—The sub-committee of the house committee on public lands decided to favorably report to the full committee Representative Townshend's bill granting bounty lands to soldiers of the late war. The bill provides that every person who served in the late war not less than fourteen days and were honorably discharged shall be entitled to 80 acres of public land; those who served not less than one year to 120 acres, and those who served not less than two years to 160 acres. In event of the death of such persons during service or after honorable discharge the patent shall issue to surviving wife, child or children, if there be any; and and if none, to father, and if no father, to mother.

Hewitt Explains.

WASHINGTON, April 28.—Hewitt, of New York, made a personal explanation as to the speech made by him Friday last on the navy appropriation bill. He reiterated the charge that the secretary of the navy had violated the law in not covering into the treasury the proceeds of the sale of condemned vessels. He did not charge that the secretary had acted dishonestly, but that he had not complied with the provisions of the act which authorized such sale.

A Contested Election Case.

WASHINGTON, April 28.—In the contested election case of Wallace vs. McKinley of Ohio the sub committee of the house committee on elections by a vote of 3 to 1 decided to report to the full committee favoring the seating of McKinley.

XLVIII Congress.

HOUSE.

WASHINGTON, April 28.—A joint resolution passed for the appointment of Wm. B. Franklin, John C. Blake and F. W. Hyde to fill vacancies in the board of managers of the national home for disabled volunteers.

A bill passed for the sale of a portion of the Fort Hayes military reservation of Kansas.

A joint resolution passed providing for the attendance of the two houses at the ceremony of unveiling the statue of Chief Justice Marshall on May 10th.

Bills were introduced and referred by request—providing that the tax imposed on circulating notes of national banks shall hereafter be devoted to the payment of expenses incurred by the United States under title 62 revised statutes, and the surplus remaining to be set apart and known as the contingent redemption fund, and to be used for the redemption of any circulating notes of any insolvent association.

Cosgrove, authorizing the lighting of navigable rivers of the United States by electricity.

Guenther, to prohibit the importation of articles of foreign manufacture bearing a mark conveying the impression that such articles are of American manufacture.

Ellis, committee on appropriations, reported a bill to provide for celebrating the world's industrial and cotton centennial exposition. Committee of the whole.

There was a very small attendance at the evening session, which was devoted to debate of the tariff bill.

Adjourned.

SENATE

Cullom, committee on railroads, reported an original bill to establish a commission to regulate inter-state commerce. Cullom stated that the bill was intended as a substitute for several bills relating to the same subject heretofore introduced. The other bills were indefinitely postponed and the bill reported placed on the calendar.

A bill passed to consolidate the bureau of military justice and corps of judge advocates of the army.

The chair laid before the senate unfinished business of Friday, being the bill to establish a bureau of animal industry and to extirpate contagious cattle diseases. The question was on the motion of McPherson to commit the bill to the committee on agriculture. Lost; yeas 12, nays 30.

Coke moved to except the disease known as Texas fever from diseases intended to be included within the meaning of the act so far as it prevented their transportation to market. Thirty per cent of the cattle coming to Chicago last year had been Texas cattle, and the testimony from the Chicago stock yards was that there had been disease among them.

The amendment was agreed to.

Morgan moved to strike out the clause authorizing payment for slaughtered cattle.

Beck was willing to authorize examination as to cattle diseases, but was unwilling to give power for indiscriminate slaughter and so give an opportunity for widespread fraud. Many of the cattlemen of the northwestern territories, he said, were foreign corporations. It was no slander to say that in many instances they sent their own representatives to the legislature, and no man could go to such legislature unless he was the representative of the cattle interest. It would not do to give those territorial legislatures power to condemn cattle by the wholesale and pay the damages out of the money of the United States.

Williams remarked that not one in twenty herds of the northwest belonged to foreigners.

Plumb said if he could have his own way those foreign corporations would not own cattle, land or anything else in the northwest. But the quantity of cattle owned by such corporations was an exceedingly small part of the cattle interest of the country. He defended the provisions of the bill, but said he had prepared an amendment which would to some extent remove the objections of the senator from Alabama. This amendment was to strike out altogether reference to the slaughter of animals.

Wilson sent to the desk and had read a letter to him from the commissioner of agriculture in reply to Wilson's inquiries, saying the exclusion of American cattle from England for at least one year would probably be immediately decided by parliament. It was understood the cattle men of England were determined to keep out American beef. The commissioner adds, "There was never a time when it was more important to ascertain the real condition of the cattle of America." "Now," Wilson said, "it was an important fact that the British government was taking positive steps to exclude American beef. We should therefore show a determination to give our cattle a clean bill of health, as they are exported.

Plumb's amendment was agreed to.

Bayard thought the purpose of the bill would now be fulfilled by an appropriation of $50,000 instead of $250,000 allowed by the house.

Plumb moved to make the appropriation $150,000. Bayard's motion to reduce the appropriation to $50,000 was disagreed to, as was also a motion of Brown to make the amount $100,000, and Plumb's amendment making the amount $150,000 was agreed to.

On motion of Harris an amendment was agreed to confining operations to cattle from which there was danger of the disease spreading from one state to another.

Miller, of California, submitted as an amendment the substance of a bill heretofore introduced by him providing for the quarantining and inspection of export cattle.

Plumb wanted to secure unanimous consent that debate on the bill should close at 3 p. m. to-morrow and a vote reached, but this was not agreed to.

Adjourned.

SUNDAY HAPPENINGS.

The murderers of Rogers and his wife, at Ouchita parish, Louisiana, were hanged by a mob.

Charles Dull, a miner, was clubbed to death in a drunken quarrel near Bradford, Pennsylvania.

Dick Putnam, a jealous husband, killed his wife and himself at Jordan, New York, while riding in a buggy.

Two grain elevators at Pekin, Illinois, belonging to Smith, Heppen & Co. and Hudnut & Co., burned. Loss, $50,000.

Max Michael, a lunatic, set fire to his bed in Philadelphia and was burned to death, together with an infant which was lying beside him.

Leonard Isels, a shoe manufacturer of Jersey City, had his skull fractured and was robbed by footpads in Hudson street, New York.

The Princess Elizabeth of Otterburg and the Grand Duke Constantine were married at the winter palace in St. Petersburg with great pomp.

The steamer Grand Pacific struck the bridge pier at Burlington, Iowa, and sunk. The boat will probably prove a total loss. No lives were lost.

At El Paso, Texas, William Allen set a spring gun for sneak thieves and killed Mrs. Charles Gilmore, a neighbor, who sought his hydrant for water.

By a collision between passenger and freight trains, on the West Pennsylvania railroad, four train men were seriously hurt, and two of them will probably die.

A man named Wilkinson, while drunk, fell over the dash board of his wagon as he was going from Pueblo to his ranch on the St. Charles, and was kicked to death by his horses.

At the Long Branch school house, Guadaloupe county, Texas, after the Sabbath school exercises, Houston Geary was killed by Gus. Scrutchins, who also shot Wiley Watson, a would-be peace maker.

A TERRIBLE WIND.

Ohio Towns Devastated by a Fearful Tornado.

The Destruction Widespread and Complete.

Life Loss Considerable--Freaks of the Wind.

An Ohio Tornado.

DAYTON, Ohio, April 27.—Shortly before 5 o'clock this afternoon the most destructive cyclone that was ever known in this part of the country passed over the southern part of Montgomery and Green counties, devastating everything in its course. It appears to have originated near Woodbury, a small town ten miles south of here, and eye witnesses describe it as appalling in its fury. An authentic statement is that the cyclone was formed by the union of two light storm clouds from the south and northwest, which immediately assumed the form of a waterspout, rising and descending like the waves of the sea, and destroying everything in its way.

Mr. E. Best, of this city, who was near enough to observe it accurately, says it was fully one eighth of a mile wide, and moved about over the country like an immense cloud of smoke, while everywhere in its path the air was dark with trees and the ruins of houses. The forests were mowed down like weeds; fences were destroyed for miles, and it is estimated that in this county alone at least twenty residences are in ruins, to say nothing of the loss of other buildings, the live stock and farm property.

At Alexandersville, six miles south of here, several people are known to be injured, and one lady reported to have been killed, while saw mills, barns and other buildings are destroyed. At Carrollton, Friend's paper mill and other buildings are badly damaged, while a number of residences are reported to have been destroyed. The telegraph lines are down in all directions, and the roads are impassable from the ruins that fell on them. Near Woodburn, the residences and other buildings belonging to Ed. Wheatley were destroyed, with other property, amounting in all to $2,000. Two farm hands were reported missing. The brick school house, No. 9, is destroyed, and the roof was carried 500 yards. Mrs. Harris' house and barn were destroyed, and one child was caught in the cyclone and carried 200 yards and then dropped to the earth only slightly injured. Mr. Mitchell's house and barn were partly ruined. Mr. Ridenour's property was badly damaged. Abner Harris' barn and other buildings were destroyed.

At Dell Brook, Green county, at least fifteen frame houses are more or less damaged, but the families generally escaped by taking refuge in the cellars. From Carrolton the cyclone took a direct easterly course, and its force was not in the least spent when it reached Jamestown, a thriving village of 600 inhabitants, which is reported as entirely destroyed, with only a few buildings left standing. Meagre telegraph reports state that four people are known to be killed, while twenty are more or less injured. Among others the residence of L. Wickersham was lifted from its foundation and carried quite a distance. Owing to the sparse settlements of the county and the blockaded roads accurate details cannot be obtained, but with such a loss of property, that of life must be terrible.

Near Xenia, there was considerable destruction. The Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans' home was badly damaged. The barn laundry and other buildings were destroyed, while the hospital and others were unroofed. Miss Harvey, the matron, and Night-watchman Richardson were injured, but no children were hurt. Between Jasper and Cedar creek, on the narrow-gauge road, the damage is great to farm property, and at this point trains were unable to move on account of the wind, while others did not dare to pass over Cedar Creek trestle during the cyclone. In all directions south and east of here the scene of destruction defies description. Whole forests were cut down like woods, and trees and the smaller buildings were carried long distances in the air.

CINCINNATI, April 28.—A News-Journal Xenia, Ohio, special says: The scene at Jamestown this morning was even worse than reported. Fully one-third of the town is in ruins. The force of the wind was terrific. Houses not entirely demolished were torn in two and lifted from their foundations. The damage is estimated from $150,000 to $200,000. Individual losses number 136. In many cases the entire house and furniture are gone; bedding and furniture blown into tree tops a long distance from the houses. The damage in the country is very great, but particulars are not yet known. The roads are impassable in the direction of the storm. Much live stock was killed. Barns, houses, fences and trees were swept away. A meeting was held here to night to organize relief for the suffering.

A Revolting Crime.

LAS VEGAS, April 28. A crime has come to light which calls for speedy vengeance at the hands of an outraged community. For some days past we have known that Officer Clark was on the track of a most heinous crime, and this afternoon when he informed us that he had arrested Francisco Villega, charged by three of his own daughters and his wife with forcing criminal intercourse with the three daughters, we were not at all surprised. The brute Villega was taken before Judge Segura at one o'clock this afternoon and evidence given by his wife and daughters goes to show that he is the most inhuman wretch who ever lived. The oldest daughter, Teresa, who is about twenty-one years of age, swore that her father raped her person when she was but a child and that she now has two children by him. The second daughter, Lucy, who cannot be sixteen years of age, gives a similar experience to that of her sister, saying that the brute has forced her into criminal intercourse since she was thirteen years of age. The youngest daughter, Rodea, is about thirteen years old and is now and has been for eight months in the employ of Johnny Shea in the capacity of restaurant waiter. She says that for ten months her father has been attempting the crime of incest and rape upon her person, but until last week owing to her youth he has not been able to accomplish his damnable purpose. One day last week he threw her upon the bed, and although she screamed for help he succeeded in ruining her. The crime is of the most revolting character and should be punished summarily and effectually. Villega should not be taken from the jail by a mob as the first instincts of insulted humanity would suggest, but should be given speedy and just trial, and the evidence will give him the full extent of the law. He is now in jail under $1,000 dollars bond. His preliminary examination comes off tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock before Justice Segura. Villega lives in the old town and is of the lowest order of the Mexican race.

Disorderly Primaries.

LOUISVILLE, April 28.—At republican primaries held in the wards of this city to night to elect delegates to the state convention the feeling was so bitter and strong between Arthur men and anti Arthur men that with one exception the ward elections were very disorderly, resulting in selecting two delegates. Many fights were serious with shooting and cutting. W. L. Mahone, chairman of the Ninth ward meeting, had his head and face horribly cut with a razor in the hands of Chas. Johnson, colored. The shooting was not serious. The proceedings at the primaries were so disorderly and irregular that the elections will all be contested. Hon. Walter Evans, commissioner of internal revenue, was elected delegate from his ward.

The Merciless Flames.

PANAMA via GALVESTON, April 28.—A terrible fire raged here from 11 last night to 4 this morning. No water was available. The market and two blocks of houses were totally destroyed. Loss half a million. During the progress of the fire a large mob, a portion armed with revolvers and machetes, did considerable plundering and many became intoxicated. Soldiers were called out and quarrelled among themselves. The owners of the burning property then fired on the plunderers, killing several. Most of the buildings burned, and nearly all contained stores of petroleum, spirits and gunpowder. One soldier is said to have been shot dead for disobeying orders. An Italian fell into the flames and perished.

The Markets.

NEW YORK, April 28.—Governments firmer; railways weak and lower. Denver & Rio Grande Western 1sts broke five points to 45. Texas Pacific fell off to 05 and Texas Pacific incomes to 45¾. Denver Consols were offered at 88¾. Stocks were weak and depressed. At the opening there was an advance of ⅛ to ¼, the latter Pacific Mail, which rose to 46½. Oregon Transcontinental was exceptionally heavy, opening 1¾ lower at 16, declining to 15⅜. Near the close there was a rally of ¼ to ½ in the general list. There was brisk demand for borrowing purposes and Northern Pacific preferred and Manitoba lent at one-sixty-fourth.

A Parricide Confesses

DES MOINES, April 28.—The State Register's Audubon special says: The murderers of old man Jellerson Saturday morning have been captured and are John A. Smith and Joel J. Wilson, his son-in-law, and Cicero Jellerson, son of the murdered man. All three are in jail. At ten this morning they were brought up for examination. Cicero became conscience-stricken and asked to make a statement under oath. He then made a full confession regarding the murder.

The Walking Match.

NEW YORK, April 28. Walking match at 10 a. m.—Burrell 42 miles, 7 laps; Sullivan 42 miles; Noremac 65 miles, 10 laps; Vint 56 miles, 9 laps; Rowell 68 miles; Thompson 47 miles, 1 lap; Nitaw Fg Ebow 40 miles, 7 laps; Elson 50 miles, 1 lap; Panchot 53 miles, 2 laps; Townsbury 45 miles, 2 laps; Herty 58 miles, 5 laps; Fitzgerald 46 miles, 7 laps; Campana 43 miles, 3 laps; Day 68 miles, 1 lap.

Fast Running.

LAS VEGAS, N. M., April 28.—In the one hundred yards foot race this afternoon between Hogan, "the coon," and Mitchell, the "dark horse," the coon won by at least 15 feet in the remarkable time of 9¾ seconds. This is the time given by two watches. Hinman says he will run the coon 65 yards for one hundred dollars. There was at least $1,800 changed hands on the race.

A Duel Over Politics.

GARYSBURG, N. C., April 28.—Two prominent colored politicians, Isaac Leggen and James Porter Spiers, were arrested when about to engage in a duel. Leggen had on two overcoats and a sheet iron plate 15 inches square, "as a chest protector to keep out the cold," he explained. The trouble came from bad blood growing out of differences as to the presidential candidates.

A Railway Horror in Spain.

MADRID, April 28.—The loss of life in yesterday's railway disaster near Cendalrials proves to have been much greater than at first reported. Thirty-eight corpses have so far been recovered from the wreck on the river. Five hundred soldiers are missing. It is believed weakening of the bridge, which led to its collapse, was the work of republicans.

Sentenced to Death.

FORT SMITH, Ark., April 28. Thomas L. Thompson and Daniel Jones, white men, Jack, the Woman Killer, Cherokee, John Davis, Choctaw, Fanny Echoes, negro, convicted in the United States court of murder in Indian territory, and Mat Music, negro, convicted of rape in Indian territory, were to-day sentenced to be hanged on Friday, July 11th.

Sale of Racers.

LONDON, April 28.—At the sale of Lord Falmouth's race horses to-day Sir John Willoughby bought the three-year-old brown colt Harvester for £8,600. The three-year-old bay filly Busy-body was purchased by Lord Arlington for £3,800. The total amount was £38,228.

A Slugging Match.

CHICAGO, April 28.—In a fight to night with small gloves, Queensbury rules, James Dalton knocked out John Driscoll, a two hundred pounder, in one and a half minutes. It was a fierce slugging contest, both men being knocked down several times.

Siam Will Exhibit

SAN FRANCISCO, April 28.—Associated press Siamese advices say the king of Siam has notified Minister Halderman that he will send exhibits to the world's cotton fair at New Orleans.

GENERAL MATTERS.

The Bessemer Steel Works Discontinue Operations.

Glens Falls, N. Y., Suffers Heavy Loss by Fire.

Masons Send Lasker Resolutions to the Reichstag.

Denver Dots

DENVER, April 28.—Several witnesses were examined in the Haller murder case to day, all of whom testified to Haller's previous good character. It now seems probable that the case will go to the jury about Wednesday night.

The Bessemer steel works at Pueblo shut down Saturday night. Mr. Danforth is authority for the statement that work will be resumed in a week or so.

Frank DeWalt will probably be tried here, although it is not definitely settled. He is rustling to raise the necessary $20,000 bond to get him out of jail.

A Destructive Fire.

GLENS FALLS, N. Y., April 28.—A terrible fire is raging. The loss will reach over $100,000. Union hall, the opera house and Presbyterian church have burned; also fifteen stores with as many offices.

Little's opera house, the Glens Falls opera house, Presbyterian church and Union hall building are burned down. The firemen demolished a part of Murderer's Row, a line of shanties, each occupied as a saloon, to prevent the spread of the fire. Thirty business firms were burned out. Total loss, $200,000; insurance $60,000.

Lasker Resolutions.

BERLIN, April 28.—The president of the reichstag announced to-day that Columbia lodge of Free Masons of San Francisco had sent to the reichstag an expression of condolence at the death of Lasker.

THE RELIGIOUS WORLD.

Notes and Comments.

The Chicago Advance publishes reports from sixty-six out of eighty-one counties in Kansas; reports made not by temperance men but by state officers. From May, 1881, to January, 1884, the saloons in Kansas had been reduced from 708 to 313, more than half the latter being in Leavenworth. During this time the population increased twelve per cent. In forty-one counties not a single saloon. The fines for violation of the law have amounted to $95,000, and eighty-one saloon keepers have been imprisoned, the aggregate imprisonment amounting to eleven years, five months and nineteen days. In fifty-one counties the reports all agree that the prohibition sentiment is growing, while only seven counties report as on the decrease. Prohibition does prohibit, and no one knows it better than the whiskey men themselves.

Some forms of modern religion are thus aptly satirized by Mr. Howells in his "Modern Instance:"

He says of religion in the town of Equity:

"Religion there has largely ceased to be a fact of spiritual experience and the visible church flourished on condition of providing for the social needs of the community. It was practically held that the salvation of one's soul must not be made too depressing, or the young people would have nothing to do with it."

In a discussion at a ministers' meeting the other day on the comparative value of extemporaneous and written sermons, the Rev. Brother Herford thus spoke to edification:

As to the question whether written or spoken sermons are better, the answer seems to me to lie a good deal on the line of that answer that was given by Henry Ward Beecher, when somebody asked him, "Are Unitarians Christians?" "Well, he said, "it depends on the Unitarian." [Laughter.] So, with regard as to whether it is better to extemporize in preaching, I should say that it depends a good deal upon the extemporizer. There are few men who can do it admirably; and when I hear one of these men who can speak extempore, speaking at his best, I feel as if I wanted to go home and burn my sermons, and never write another. All my writing and reading seem so poor compared with the living word of the prophet, coming right out of his heart under the spur of the moment, such as we sometimes hear it. But I agree with the admirable paper of our friend, Dr. Peabody, as to the general effect of the extempore preaching. I think that it tends rather to reduce preaching to the level which was indicated by the answer of a certain colored brother. He was asked, "What are you going to preach about to-day?" "Well, massa, I 'spects to play round 'mong the psalms." [Laughter.] There is a good deal of extempore preaching that is like playing round among the Psalms, and then it is pretty poor.

There is this for the encouragement of those of us who have, after trying extempore preaching a good deal, gradually settled down into the feeling that we have more liberty when we have our thought clearly marked out in our minds and also upon paper; namely, that some of the greatest preachers have been men who have not only written every line, but have read every line. Certainly there was no preacher on our side of the water in the last generation to equal Dr. Chalmer's preaching in Scotland—where written notes were like the abomination of the beast—who took Scotland by storm with his preaching; only, as the old woman remarked when some one objected that he read, "All but it's fell reading you!"

It is a curious fact that according to the last census the clergymen and the lawyers of the United States just about offset each other—the clergymen a little more numerous. There are 64,608 clergymen and 64,137 lawyers in the country. It would appear that not more ministers are needed but a better distribution through the country of such as are already in the field.

Readers of Tennyson remember the lines to the Rev. F. D. Maurice, beginning

"Come when no graver care displays
Good father come and see your boy
Your presence will be seen in what e
Making the little one leap for joy."

In the life of Maurice by his son, just published, the following lively and vivid picture of the great English theologian's fervor in composition will interest and amuse those to whom by virtue of his large and sweet humanity he has come to seem like a personal friend:

"It was a very great relief to him," writes Colonel Maurice, "to compose his books by dictation and to avoid the labor of mechanical writing. His usual manner of dictation was to sit with a pillow on his knees, hugged tightly in his arms, or to walk up and down the room still clutching the pillow, or suddenly sitting down, or standing before the fire, with the pillow still on his knees or under his left arm, to serve a poker and violently attack the fire, then to walk away from it to the furthest end of the room, return and poke violently at the fire, with not unfrequently incomplete unconsciousness of what he was doing, poking the whole contents of the fire place through the bars into the fender. The habit of holding the pillow whenever he engaged in exciting talk dates from such early days that one of his undergraduate Cambridge friends used to say that a black horse hair pillow which he then had, always followed him about of itself. My mother, in the Guy's days, used to call such an one his black wife. All the while he poured forth a continuous stream of words."

EASTER

BY SUSAN COOLIDGE.

When the snow was deep, we said
'Tis a coverlet, gently spread—
Spread and folded tenderly
Where the sleeping lilies lie.
Fold on fold of fleecy white,
Cold to touch and pure to sight,
Wrapped about the deep repose
Of the violet and the rose
Softly speak and lightly tread,
Death is guarding Life, we said.

When the spring was late, we said,
While the storm-wind blew o'erhead,
God's dear springtime doth but wait.
Come it soon or come it late,
Come it slow or come it fast,
It will surely come at last.
Frosts may blight and buds may rue,
Still the promise standeth true,
Though the earth seem sore beateed,
God does not forget, we said.

When our souls were dark, we said
Courage, soul, be comforted!
Every life some hardness knows,
Winter time and heavy snows;
Though the spring be cold and wait,
Prayers in time shall change to praise,
Easter crown the Lenten days;
Christ is risen from the dead,
Christ shall raise us, too, we said

Call for Republican State Convention.

HEADQUARTERS REPUBLICAN STATE CENTRAL COMMITTEE,
DENVER, Colo., April 10, 1884.

At the meeting of this committee, held this day, it was ordered that a state republican convention be held on Thursday, May 1st, at 10 a. m., at Denver, for the purpose of electing six delegates to vote for the republicans of the state at the convention which meets in Chicago June 3d, to nominate a candidate for president and vice president of the United States.

THE ARTESIAN WELL EXPERIMENT.

The city council through a special committee has issued the following statement in regard to the artesian well together with an inquiry of the taxpayers as to whether this work should continue:

The cost of casing already purchased is about $1,700. If we should stop the work now, we can take this casing out, and return it at a moderate discount, and, in that case the amount spent in making the experiment would be about $2,000. If we continue the work, and concede the present demands of the contractor, we must purchase additional casing to the amount of about $2,300—or $4,000 in all. If we should do this and sink the well to the depth of 1,600 feet, and fail to get water, and then abandon the work, we could draw out the casing and sell or use it so as to make about $4,000; but if we should get a flow of water at that depth, we could only withdraw enough casing to return about $1,000, making the well cost about $6,000. To recapitulate: If we abandon the work now, the cost will be about $2,000, or about one mill on the taxable valuation of the city; if we go on and fail, the cost will be about $4,000, or two mills; if we go on and succeed, the cost will be $6,000, or three mills. The contractor is not to receive any portion of his pay until the work is completed. He has in fact, been paid about $1,200, but for this the city holds a mortgage on the outfit which is worth more than double that amount. The well is now down about 1,100 feet and is not yet through the shale. It is not our intention to make any guess or estimate as to how much farther we may have to go before we will get through this formation or as to whether we will get water as soon as we get through. Nor will we attempt to give any of the reasons, for or against, the further prosecution of the work. All we wish is to know the pleasure of the tax payers of the city. Shall we go on with the work?

It was a very wise act on the part of the council to get an expression of opinion from the tax payers before proceeding with the work of sinking the artesian well. The last council undoubtedly carried out the wishes of a majority of the tax payers in beginning the experiment. But it was not thought by the tax payers or the council that the experiment would cost $6,000. As the cost will be so great it is right to know whether the tax payers wish the experiment to be continued.

But it seems to us that the matter is not presented in a way that our tax payers can intelligently answer the question. It is not a question simply whether $6,000 shall be expended. But it is also a question whether this money shall be wasted in a useless experiment or not. We say this advisedly. Men of scientific attainment who have made a study of this question of artesian wells say that there is no chance of sinking an artesian well here successfully. We know of no man whose knowledge on this question entitles him to respect who gives an opinion to the contrary. Geologists who have carefully studied this question are able with great certainty to determine whether an artesian well can be successfully sunk or not. It seems to us that such a scientific man should be consulted and his opinion of the probabilities given, before it is decided to expend more money. If it is true that this basin is so small that there is not the least chance of striking water, then there is no use of prosecuting the experiment if the well can be sunk for ten cents a foot. It is foolish to proceed in this matter blindly when we can have the opinion of scientific men which will at least give us the probabilities. Let us consult a man like Mr. Cross of the United States geological survey who has carefully studied this formation and has given special attention to the sinking of artesian wells. It is certain that they can determine the question whether there is a probability of our getting water, which should be decided before more money is spent.

But even if the expenditure of $6,000 was certain to sink the well successfully, it is a question whether it should be done. It would furnish only a very small part of the water necessary for irrigation, and we would be compelled to sink a great many wells. We need water to irrigate 800 acres. The average artesian well will not irrigate over ten acres, and some 80 would be necessary for this city. The cost would be immense, and much better, cheaper and surer means of getting water can be found. In fact, the idea of sinking artesian wells for irrigating purposes has been practically given up as too expensive. It is of use in a city when the water for domestic purposes is poor, but it is not a practicable way of getting water for irrigation. A reservoir system would be much cheaper.

It seems to us therefore that the questions to be asked and answered before we begin work again are these:

First—Is there any probability of our striking water? Scientific men can answer this.

Second—If there is a strong probability of our striking water, is it worth while to continue to try the experiment, when such a system would not give us the irrigation water we need at a reasonable cost?

Third—If the chances of getting water are good, and we wish to spend the money to try an experiment which will not solve our water question, how much money can we afford to spend?

It seems to us these are the vital questions. The fact that we have lost $2,000 is no argument for losing $4,000.

PERSONAL.

Mrs Ole Bull will revisit Norway this year.

Francois Mignet was a judicious and discriminating conversationalist. Jules Simon said of him "In all the years I have been acquainted with him I have never known him to cast a pearl before swine."

During the recent fighting in Egypt Baker Pasha's cheekbone was splintered by a four-ounce iron bullet, which was so firmly fixed in the bone that it had to be sawn out a long and painful operation—which was endured without any anesthetic.

Sir Stafford Northcote recently declared Lord Randolph Churchill to be "playing the part of bonnet to the government." The house of commons was puzzled to understand the expression, but the slang dictionary says that the "bonnet" in roques' parlance is the confederate of the card sharper and thimble-rigger who, with an air of innocence, decoys greenhorns into the trap.

Professor Piazza Smyth writes thus to the Cleveland Society for Preserving and Perfecting Weights and Measures, of a new objection to the metric system: "Let me applaud your idea that the European countries which have adopted the meter are those which were conquered by Napoleon Bonaparte, and those which have not adopted it are those which Napoleon tried to conquer but could not, God over ruling him."

Senator Vest never sees Henry Watterson without being reminded of a scene at the democratic convention of 1880 "in the evening, after the organization," he says, "I dropped into the room of the committee on resolutions. There were only two members present, Watterson and John P. Irish, of Iowa. The Kentuckian had a bottle of champagne at his elbow and Irish was fixed with a bottle of whisky. They were sweating away over the platform. The pair, at this moment, illustrated the humor of politics. Here was a man from a state that could by no possibility be swerved from its democracy by any issue, and the other from a commonwealth as tenaciously wedded to its republican idols; and these two fellows were assiduously engaged in constructing a platform to carry the doubtful states."

The Origin of Religion.

Frederick Harrison, in the Nineteenth Century.

The origin of religion is to be sought in the countless ages before the rise of theology; before spirits, ghosts, or gods ever took definite form in the human mind. The primitive uncultured man frankly worshiped external objects in love and in fear, ascribing to them quasi-human powers and feelings. All that we read about Animism, ghosts, spirits and universal idea of godhead in this truly primitive stage are metaphysical assumptions of men trying to read the ideas of later epochs into the facts of an earlier epoch. Nothing is more certain than that man everywhere started with a simple worship of natural objects. And the bearing of this on the future of religion is decisive. The religion of man in the vast cycles of primitive ages was reverence for nature as influencing man. The religion of man in the vast cycles that are to come will be the reverence for humanity as supported by nature. The religion of man in the twenty or thirty centuries of theology was reverence for the assumed authors or controllers of nature. But, that assumption having broken as, religion does not break up with it. On the contrary, it enters on a far greater and more potent career, inasmuch as the natural emotions of the human heart are now combined with the certainty, of scientific knowledge. The final religion of enlightened man is the systematized and scientific form of the spontaneous religion of natural man. Both rest on the same elements—belief in the power which controls his life, and grateful reverence for the power so acknowledged. The primitive man thought that power to be the object of nature affecting man. The cultured man knows that power to be humanity itself, controlling and controlled by nature according to natural law. The transitional and perpetually changing creed of theology has been an interlude. Agnosticism has uttered its epilogue. But Agnosticism is no more religion than differentiation or the nebular hypothesis is religion. We have only to see what are the elements and ends of religion to recognize that we cannot find it in the negative and the unknown. In any reasonable use of language religion implies some kind of belief in a power outside ourselves, some kind of awe and gratitude felt for that power, some kind of influence exerted by it over our lives. There are always in some sort these three elements—belief, worship, conduct. A religion which gives us nothing in particular to believe, nothing as an object of awe and gratitude, which has no special relation to human duty, is not a religion at all. It may be formula, a generalization, a logical postulate; but it is not a religion. The universal presence of the unknowable (or rather of the unknown) substratum is not a religion. It is a logical postulate. You may call it, if you please, the first axiom of science, a law of the human mind, or perhaps better, the universal postulate of philosophy. But try it by every test which indicates religion and you will find it wanting.

General Hancock's Romance

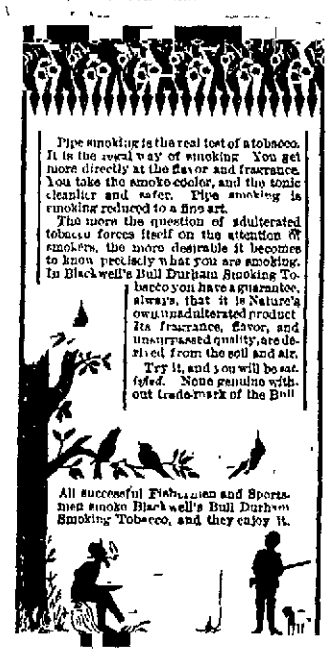

Correspondence Burton Times.

I was talking politics with a senator from the west, this week, and, on mentioning General Hancock's name, he told me a story of the gallant general that is romantic enough to repeat. Soon after his graduation from West Point, when but a little past his majority, he started for the west in company with a number of army men, to see the country. They stopped at St. Louis, and while there General Hancock met his future wife. He was taking one of his customary morning rides on horseback in the most fashionable part of the city, when he caught sight of a handsome young lady standing at a window. His heart was touched at once—and for the first time—and, without a thought of the impropriety of his action, involuntarily he reined his charger and took off his hat. The fair vision at the window waved a shapely white hand, blushed, and drew the curtain. This only increased the young man's distance, and when he returned to his hotel his absent-mindedness and evident abstraction provoked comment on the part of his friends. Try as he would, the beautiful face at the window haunted him still, and he yielded to an irresistible impulse to return to the house where his fate resided, in hope of getting another wave of the hand or a smile of encouragement to love's young dream. As luck would have it, fortune smiled on the young man, and the lady was just leaving the house, accompanied by a tall and elderly gentleman, as he reached there. She recognized him at once, and rosy blushes suffused her face as she entered a carriage in waiting and was driven rapidly away. Young Hancock was now more eager than ever, and, hailing a passing cab, directed the driver to follow the carriage containing the beautiful unknown. Finally her carriage stopped, and she entered the house of an old army friend of the ardent lover, who followed close after and was admitted by the friend in person. To him the smitten youth unbosomed himself, and an introduction followed to Miss Mary Russell, a daughter of one of St. Louis' wealthiest merchants. The young lady seemed to have been struck by the same dart that pierced her lover's heart, and a cordial invitation to call was extended to him. I need say no more. The rest of the story is simply the oft told tale, for in six months Miss Mary Russell became Mrs. Winfield Scott Hancock, and she is held in the warmest esteem by all those who know her many charming and womanly qualities. This is but one of many romantic tales that one hears here nearly every day, and their recital is one of the pleasantest features of Washington life.

Ristori's Plea.

Boston Saturday Times.

I met one day last week an old lady who told me this story of Ristori, of whom she spoke in terms of most devoted friendship. The story has never, she told me, been in print before: Years ago Madame Ristori was playing in the city of Madrid, in the Royal theatre. She had carried the audience away in the act by her great power, the curtain had fallen on the first act, and unusually long applause occurred. No one could understand her absence. The time came and passed when she should have resumed play. What was the meaning of her absence? As she was passing from the stage, in the wings stood a poor woman who caught her garment. "Madame," she said, "do you hear that bell now tolling?" "Yes." "That bell tolls for the death of my husband; he will die at sunrise to morrow. Won't you," imptored the woman, "plead for me? The queen sits in the box yonder." The great tragedy queen went to the royal box and begged for the life of that man—a man that she had no particular interest in, but simply because he was going to die. Madame Ristori pleaded so well with the queen that with a pencil she wrote his reprieve, and he was saved. Meanwhile the truth had crept out among the audience, and when the curtain rose again the whole audience sprang to their feet. Tears ran like rain. Hats and handkerchiefs were waved, and shout after shout went up from the multitude—not for the tragic queen, but for the woman infinitely greater—the woman that pleaded for a life, and not in vain.

Indianapolis Sentinel

Abraham Lincoln, while a resident of New Salem, Ill, followed various avocations With the rest he was "storekeeper" and postmaster. On a certain occasion one of his friends, having learned that an agent of the postoffice department and a "drummer" were in the village the former to collect what was due the government from Lincoln as postmaster, the latter to receive from him, as trader, what was owing the firm represented by himself—and knowing that Lincoln was never overburdened with spare funds, went to the store and offered to lend him a sum sufficient to meet the claims he was so soon to be called upon to settle 'You are very kind," said Lincoln, "but I do not think I shall require your assistance" Within a few minutes the agent entered their presence, and Lincoln took an old stocking from the drawer, out of which he poured a lot of copper and silver coin—the latter mostly in pieces of small denomination. "There is the very money I have taken on account of the post office," he remarked to the agent, "and I think you will find it the exact amount due you" It was to a cent. The business had hardly been concluded when in came the "drummer" Lincoln had recourse to another old stocking, with a similar result. So soon as the two were again by themselves the friend said 'I suppose were a third creditor to present himself a third stocking would enable you to settle with him,' smiling "Yes," returned the future president, "Look here," and he held up three other stockings "In each of these is the sum I severally owe to three parties, the only persons in the world to whom I am pecuniarily indebted I see you are amused at my method of transacting business I never allow myself to use money that is not mine, however sorely pressed I may be, and I intend to be prepared to pay my bills when they become due without delay or inconvenience to those whom I owe. The simple system which I have adopted—using a stocking to represent each creditor and placing in it the money to be passed to the creditor himself at some future day—renders the former unnecessary and the latter possible"

An Anecdote of Jenny Lind

Pall Mall Budget.

As an illustration of the constant anxiety of artists concerning their powers, Mrs Reeves tells how one famous prima donna refused to sit down at all on a day she was to sing "No, she would walk about the room, talking, perhaps, singing perhaps sometimes even busy with her needle and thread, but never sitting down the livelong day until the performance was over" "Why, I remember well enough how exactly, on the morning of a performance, Jenny Lind (Mme Goldschmidt) Mr Reeves Mr Otto Goldschmidt and myself were in the room, and through the morning, Jenny Lind and my husband were never still, pacing one past the other, with music in hand, singing and practicing, and intent on the work before them 'Why Jenny' said Mr Goldschmidt, 'you must have sung those songs many times surely there is no need for all this' But the remonstrance was in vain 'You are a fine man,' said Mme Goldschmidt, in her quiet, decisive manner to her husband, 'but Mr Reeves and I are singers, and we know what is best for us, Leave us alone' Suppose you had called to see Jenny Lind on a day when she was singing She would probably come into the room with a bundle of music in her hand put it on a chair and sit down on it talk away pleasantly enough for a few minutes become abstracted take up the music, turn to a passage in one of the pieces, and hum it over Having satisfied herself of her correctness she would replace it and sit down again as calmly as possible and resume the conversation at the point it was left off"

Can the Bayonet be Supplanted !

The Saturday Review

As usual, infinite suggestions have been made tending generally to the substitution of something—revolvers, bowies crosses, knobkeries, short Roman swords, and what not—for the bayonet The most practical and valid answer proffered has been that it will be time to condemn the bayonet when the private soldier has been properly taught to use it in single combat, which he certainly is not now That there is no weapon so easily adaptable and so little cumbersome when not in active use as the bayonet—is certain and it is also certain that the need for such use as it came into at Tamanieb does not occur except at the rarest intervals But it must probably be admitted that any weapon which like the bayonet, can only be used with two hands and those wide apart, is at a certain disadvantage in a rough and tumble fight at close quarters, where a great number of men are engaged together Those who appeal to the feats of the bayonet in skilled hands at assaults of arms forget that in that case there is plenty of space Still spears and swords of any length being out of the question for a lineman, (who is quite sufficiently burdened and occupied by his rifle,) and bowies and all similar weapons having the obvious drawback of want of reach (unless used navaja fashion, which leaves the user defenseless against a fresh attack) there is probably nothing better than the bayonet, But that instruction in it should be real personal instruction, and not mere bayonet drill, is certain, and probably much might be done to improve its quality as well as that of the regulation sword

MISS M. A. CARPENTER, Manager

Alderman W. H. Roby has gone on a visit to his old home in Ohio

The El Paso delegates to the state convention will leave for Denver to morrow.

The El Paso county Sunday school convention will open in this city on Thursday.

There will be a grand march with a May pole wind-up at the skating rink on the first of May.

United States Marshal Walt Smith is in the city in attendance at the bed side of a very sick child.

Our esteemed contemporary come to the front with the "Pueblo Prophecy" published in the GAZETTE two months ago

A foot ball match will be played to-night at the skating rink between the Reds and Blues. A very exciting time is expected

G. A. R. Post No. 23 will give a sociable at their rooms on Huerfano street this evening. An interesting programme has been prepared.

Dr. R. G. Buckingham, chairman of the board of trustees of the Deaf Mute institute, came down from Denver on Sunday and is at The Antlers.

The fortnightly reception will be given at the Grace Church association rooms this evening. An interesting programme of a literary and musical nature has been arranged for.

The D. & R. G. railway will sell to delegates and alternates excursion tickets to Denver and return on April 29 and 30, good to return till May 5, at $2.50 for the round trip.

The Young People's Social and Literary society will meet in the vestry of the M. E. church this evening. An interesting programme is being prepared and the members are urgently requested to be present.

The funeral of Mrs. O. Palmer took place from the family residence on East Kiowa street yesterday morning at 10 o'clock, and was largely attended by the acquaintances and friends of the family. The remains were interred in Evergreen cemetery.

Sergeant Hall will to-morrow make another desperate attempt to accomplish the ascent of the peak to relieve Mr. Ramsey, who has been there for seven weeks with scanty provisions. The snow on the trail is very deep and the trip will be a perilous one.

Mr. Fred Mangold, who but a short time ago returned from a year's service in the Mexican Central surveying corps, left yesterday for Denver, where he will accept a position with the Denver & New Orleans railway surveyors between Pueblo and Fort Worth.

Deputy Sheriff Len Jackson has been appointed deputy assessor for the western and southern districts of El Paso county, and left for the south yesterday. He is thoroughly well acquainted in the south and has done similar work in the northern part of the county and has given general satisfaction.

There was a fair audience at the temperance rally at the M. E. church south last evening. The principal address of the evening was delivered by Mr. L. D. Ratliff. At the conclusion of his address speeches were delivered by Messrs. E. N. Bartlett, A. P. St. John and C. N. Mills. Temperance meetings will probably be held monthly hereafter.

The fence and grand stand at the Association grounds in the northern part of the city have been torn down preparatory to removal. All that remains to tell the tale of one of the most active sporting organizations in the state is a few piles of lumber on the vacant lots. Many of the residents in the neighborhood are glad to see the fence taken away.

Both John Roman and Richard Wright, charged with a violation of the liquor ordinance, came up before Justice Pixley yesterday. Two witnesses for the prosecution and none for the defense were examined. Justice Pixley reserved his decision until to day. Testimony was also introduced in this case for the prosecution by Messrs. Jackson and Whitmore. Decision was also reserved in this case until Wednesday morning.

An adjourned meeting of the city council was held last evening for the purpose of considering the matter of continuing the work on the artesian well. There were present Mayor Humphrey and Aldermen Draper, Jones, Hughes, Farrar, Strickler and Hemenway. After some informal discussion the council adjourned until to-morrow night, in order to give time for a full circulation of the petitions presented to the tax payers in regard to prosecuting the work on the well or not.

The remaining members of the Raymond excursion party that has been spending the winter in California left for the east yesterday morning. All composing the party were extremely well pleased with Manitou and its surroundings, and they only wished that they had left California earlier and staid in Colorado longer. Only expressions of praise were heard as to the courteous treatment extended by Messrs. Bailey & Walker during their sojourn there. The Philadelphians leave this morning for Leadville and Gunnison instead of going to Durango and Silverton.

Messrs. J. A. Holmes and B. Gilpin, the round-up commissioners, inform us that the round-up in the sixth district will commence its work on the first day of June, at the southeastern limit of said district, and work up the north side of the Arkansas river to Pueblo, from where one outfit will continue to work up the river to the southwestern corner of the district. One outfit will work up the Fountain creek from Pueblo to Fountain town, including Fransisco and Steel hollows, Little Fountain and Rock Creek. After leaving the Fountain the round-up will work the water holes, Chico Brakes, Crow's Roost, and Big Springs, respectively, from Big Springs to the head waters of the Big Sandy and along the northern district, leaving Jimmy's camp and the foot hills west of the Monument for the last work of the summer hunt.

The next attraction at the opera house will be Gus Williams in "One of the Finest." The Indianapolis News of September 21st says: "Gus Williams, than whom there are but few better and more popular comedians in his line before the public, opened an engagement of four performances at English's last night to an audience that packed the galleries and filled the lower part of the house. 'One of the Finest,' in which Mr. Williams has acquired much merited fame and applause as John Mishler, the amiable, whole-souled German policeman, was given in an excellent manner, the comedian being supported by an evenly-balanced company. The play has been seen too often to need any extended notice. The songs and recitations of the star were excellently rendered and created flattering applause. George Waldron as Hugh Hickman, T. Q. Seabrooke, James Eastman, Kate Beebe, as Mrs. Mishler, and De Loss King, as Mort. Devine, are worthy of special mention, while the remainder of the cast was satisfactory. The same play will run to-morrow night, with a Saturday matinee."
